

Contemplations of Our Nation

By Jack Bowser

In this grand nation there lies many a connotation. The Declaration that you're subjected to verbal mutilation if you happen to not pass interrogation, perhaps due to some sort of miscommunication. You're not one of them if there isn't a correlation in your looks, views, or life versus others. People think you have some sort of mutation. But how can you look at creation as a miscalculation? This most often leads to condemnation to a special location for an infinite duration where you have a revelation that there is no chance for salvation and that this is no longer an exaggeration. It will definitely hurt your relation and further your realization that this point is the culmination of all your non-representation. It's a process of great degradation because it shows that we have confrontations instead of integration. So what's the best way to avoid this type of annihilation? Isolation? This will lead to a lot of aggravation and further contemplation which leaves you thinking there's absolutely no chance for reconciliation. Some form a congregation and it's their inclination to have a reclamation of the information they're allotted before their impending hospitalization. Sure seems like we're alluding to segregation...

© 2011 Jack Bowser