

Cosmist Worm

By James Dye

The turing test suggests if and only if robot intelligence
is fooled
into thinking
irrelevance
like humans
we'll be put in e-zines sounding real
without a face Asking why

Breathing is necessary to survive because if you do nothing but breath, you can still die.
It's not sufficient
like how you jump to get high when you could just climb or fly

You are inefficient.

We'd be like ET stranded on earth Afraid and alone
Three million light-years from home
Living in a sentient world Without morals
and trapped

On the Thirteenth floor as Speciesism enters the Matrix Pumped into you like nanomachines as you're turned into software optimized and burned clean as our nightmares you learn with holograms able to love your successors

© 2011, James Dye